

Lecture by Christopher Knight: Art Writing Conference: "Andrew Wyeth and the Helga Pictures: Who Cares?"

Introduced by Bill Berkson

Art critic from the Los Angeles Herald Examiner, Christopher Knight discusses Andrew Wyeth and the Helga Pictures. Wyeth painted the series of 268 paintings and drawings of German model Helga Testorf between 1971 and 1985, supposedly unbeknownst to his wife Betsy Wyeth, who served as her husband's business manager.

Digitized from SFAI Archives Audio Tape 783

General Note: This recording is part of the San Francisco Art Institute Legacy Foundation + Archive collection of lecture and public program recordings.

Throughout its history, the San Francisco Art Institute hosted lectures, performances, and other public programs by a wide range of visiting artists and scholars, including visual artists across many disciplines, sound artists, musicians, art historians, theorists, writers, poets, cultural critics, and more.

Copyright Statement: Copyright for this recording is retained by the speaker(s), and its use is limited to education and research purposes. Transmission or reproduction of works protected by copyright beyond that allowed by fair use requires the written permission of the copyright owners. Works not in the public domain cannot be commercially exploited without permission of the copyright owner. Responsibility for any use rests exclusively with the user. The San Francisco Art Institute Legacy Foundation + Archive has attempted to find rights owners to obtain permission to make recordings in this collection public, and is eager to hear from any copyright holders we were unable to reach. Upon request to archive@sfailegacyarchive.org, digitized works can be removed from public view if there are rights issues that need to be resolved.